After careful review and consideration of your credit card application, we regret to inform you that we are unable to approve your request for a credit card at this time. This decision has been made based on information obtained from your credit history and the evaluation of your financial situation. The specific reasons for the decline may include, but are not limited to:

1. Insufficient Credit History: The lack of an established credit history can make it challenging for us to assess your creditworthiness.

2. Low Credit Score: A low credit score can indicate higher credit risk, making it difficult to extend credit at this moment.

3. High Outstanding Debt: Existing debt obligations can impact your creditworthiness and may affect our ability to approve additional credit.

4. Recent Credit Applications: Multiple recent credit applications can raise concerns about potential financial strain.

5. Inaccurate or Incomplete Information: Errors or missing information in your application can affect the decision-making process.

Please note that the decision is solely based on the information available at the time of the application, and you are entitled to a free credit report from the credit reporting agencies if you wish to review the details used in the evaluation.
